Protect the child.
No exceptions.

No church. No clergy privilege. No religious doctrine should ever stand between an abused child and the authorities.

REPORT IT.
EVERY TIME.

A father admitted to his Mormon bishop that he was sexually abusing his five-year-old daughter. The bishop called the Church's abuse help line. According to the Associated Press, the call went to Church lawyers, and the bishop was told he "absolutely can do nothing." A second bishop got the same answer. No one called the police. The abuse continued for years and spread to a newborn sister, until investigators in New Zealand found the videos online.

7	2	2
YEARS OF ABUSE AFTER THE FIRST CONFESSION	BISHOPS WHO KNEW AND DID NOT REPORT	CHILDREN ABUSED IN THAT HOME

If an adult learns that a child is being sexually abused, should any religious rule permit that adult to keep it secret?

OUR ANSWER IS: NO.

THE DEMAND

Report every credible case of child abuse to civil authorities. Immediately. Everywhere.

We call on The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to report abuse to police whether or not local law lets clergy stay silent, and to publicly acknowledge its handling of the Adams case.

protectthechild.github.io/petition

SIGN

Scan to sign

POINT YOUR CAMERA HERE

Sources: Associated Press investigation; federal court records. Content note: describes the sexual abuse of children.
If a child is in danger, call 911. Childhelp National Child Abuse Hotline: 1-800-422-4453.

Presented by RebuttaLDS.org
Please post freely.